ARSC300. Issues in Global Studies

Explain, when appropriate, how this new/revised curriculum supports the 10 goals of undergraduate education: <http://www.ugs.udel.edu/gened/>

General Education Goals to Success

- 1. Attain effective skills in (a) oral and (b) written communication, (c) quantitative reasoning, and (d) the use of information technology.

The Global Studies Minor (GSM), while anchored in and administered by the College of Arts and Sciences, will give undergraduate students in all across the seven colleges the opportunity to study and analyze contemporary regional and cross-regional issues as well as their historical and cultural roots. As such, students will have the opportunity to take a wide array of courses from different departments and colleges that include the development of oral, written and quantitative skills and training.

- 2. Learn to think critically to solve problems.

One of the goals of this minor is to increase global literacy through the study of issues associated with contemporary regional and global trends (examples: technology and global change, climate change, environmental degradation, health threats, international migration, gender issues, poverty, terrorism, natural disasters, human security, democratization, globalization, conflict resolution, diasporas, among others). As a result, this minor will encourage students to develop an analytical approach to global issues, by comparing how issues and trends in one region play out in others.

- 3. Be able to work and learn both independently and collaboratively.

Many of the courses included in the Global Studies Minor will give students the opportunity to work collaboratively, whether it is learning a foreign language, study abroad with fellow classmates, or working with others on projects and presentations. Independently, students will be expected to engage critically in research and writing, as well as be expected to individually master the content presented in each respective class.

- 4. Engage questions of ethics and recognize responsibilities to self, community, and society at large.

The range of empirical phenomena which students will have to study in their coursework is ultimately grounded in ethical concerns that require self-reflection, as well as creative problem-solving. For Track 2 (Human Rights and Security) related coursework includes world politics, foreign policy and statecraft, state-based conflict (international war), as well as non-state security issues including terrorism, international migration, poverty, as well as other human security issues such as the environment, violence against women, energy, natural resources, climate change, tropical forest depletion, food productions, etc. This also includes global and international health issues, broadly understood, including: global disease, nutritional challenges, and other related topics.

5. Understand the diverse ways of thinking that underlie the search for knowledge in the arts, humanities, sciences and social sciences.

Global issues are often multidimensional and complex and therefore need to be approached from different disciplinary perspectives. For this reason, students will be required to take courses in a variety of disciplines in the social sciences (i.e. political science and international relations, anthropology, sociology) history, women's studies, humanities, the arts, natural sciences, and health sciences. As a result, students will be exposed to a variety of ways of thinking and sources of knowledge thus fostering a healthy sense of disciplinary tolerance.

6. Develop the intellectual curiosity, confidence, and engagement that will lead to lifelong learning.

The varieties of courses counting towards the Global Studies Minor allow students the flexibility and creativity to choose topics they are most passionate about, as well as those that push them beyond their intellectual comfort zones. Because students can choose courses offered by all seven colleges, they have an opportunity to engage with professors and students outside of their college. Such experiences will enhance their confidence and ability to communicate in various forms of teaching and learning.

7. Develop the ability to integrate academic knowledge with experiences that extend the boundaries of the classroom.

Students are strongly encouraged to participate in a Study Abroad program and take language courses, both which will count towards fulfilling the minor's requirements.

8. Expand understanding and appreciation of human creativity and diverse forms of aesthetic and intellectual expression.

The Global Studies Minor will be open to undergraduate students in any major. Students will be required to take three courses from one of the tracks, and students cannot count more than 6 credits from the home department of their major towards the minor. It is the expectation that through such requirements, students from different majors will engage in courses that are outside their intellectual home and as such, expand the scope and range of their intellectual appreciation for different pedagogies and topics.

9. Understand the foundations of United States society including the significance of its cultural diversity.

Students pursuing this minor will cultivate a greater appreciation for other cultures through a combination of coursework, study abroad, language training, lectures, workshops, and other activities. Cultural diversity and tolerance are important foundational components of the United States.

10. Develop an international perspective in order to live and work effectively in an increasingly global society.

Students pursuing this minor will cultivate a greater appreciation for other cultures through the combination of coursework, study abroad, language training, lectures, workshops, and other activities. Furthermore, this minor will allow students to take courses that focus on issues and trends that span more than one continent or region. In addition, and when appropriate, new courses that focus on global themes or issues will be developed to support the minor.

Identify other units affected by the proposed changes:

(Attach permission from the affected units. If no other unit is affected, enter “None”)

See attachment “Endorsements Global Studies Minor”.

Describe the rationale for the proposed program change(s):

(Explain your reasons for creating, revising, or deleting the curriculum or program.)

This minor provides University of Delaware undergraduates with the opportunity to increase their awareness of global issues through the study of contemporary global trends. The minor seeks to prepare students to succeed in a world that is increasingly globalized by exposing them to the political and cultural foundations of global issues. The minor allows students to take courses that focus on issues and trends that span more than one continent or region. This minor also encourages students to develop an analytical approach to global issues, by comparing how issues and trends in one region play out in others. The minor cultivates a greater appreciation for other cultures through a combination of coursework, study abroad, language training, lectures, workshops, and other activities. The minor offers two tracks. Students must select one and take three of the courses offered under the selected track.

Program Requirements:

Minor in Global Studies: General Justification

CENTER FOR GLOBAL AND AREA STUDIES – INSTITUTE FOR GLOBAL STUDIES

The Global Studies Minor at the University of Delaware

A Proposal

One of the strategic milestones established in our Path to Prominence Strategic Plan is the Global Initiative. The plan argues, correctly, that the University of Delaware must both prepare students to be contributing citizens of the world and serve as a ‘citizen university’ in a global society. Moreover, it commits our university to “foster[ing] knowledge and awareness of the economic, environmental, political, cultural, and social issues that face the world – and the skills to address them.” Joining forces, the Center for Global and Area Studies (CGAS), the Institute for Global Studies (IGS), and the Colleges seek to move UD forward as a global university making a significant difference in the world.

The Global Studies Minor (GSM), while anchored in and administered by the College of Arts and Sciences, will give undergraduate students in all seven colleges the opportunity to study and analyze contemporary regional and cross-regional issues as well as their historical and cultural roots.

This 16-credit minor will:

- Increase awareness of global issues through the study of contemporary global trends (examples: climate change, environmental degradation, health threats, international migration, global poverty, international terrorism, natural disasters, human security, democratization, globalization, conflict resolution, diasporas, gender and sexuality, among others)
- Prepare students to succeed in a world that is increasingly globalized by exposing them to the political and cultural foundations of global issues

The key components of this minor are:

- Global Perspective: This minor will allow students to take courses that focus on issues and trends that span more than one continent or region. In addition, and when appropriate, new courses that focus on global themes and issues will be developed to support the minor. This minor will also encourage students to develop an analytical approach to global issues, by comparing how issues and trends in one region play out in others.
- Interdisciplinary Work: Global issues are often multidimensional and complex and therefore need to be approached from different disciplinary perspectives. For this reason, students will be required to pursue a broadly interdisciplinary curriculum that includes courses in a variety of disciplines in the social sciences, the humanities, the arts, natural sciences, health sciences, business and economics, and engineering.
- Cultural Awareness: Students pursuing this minor will cultivate a greater appreciation for other cultures through a combination of coursework, study abroad, language training, lectures, workshops, and other activities.

One important objective of this minor is to foster strategic collaborations between the College of Arts and Sciences' Center for Global and Area Studies, the Institute for Global Studies and the other six colleges, with the common goal of strengthening our university's Global Initiative. The minor will be administered by the Center for Global and Area Studies (its director will also act as the Academic Advisor for the minor) but supported by coursework in all seven colleges. The Institute for Global Studies will assist CGAS in leveraging these cross-college collaborations on curriculum. Taking into account that students who have an interest in international affairs are usually attracted to particular issues or themes, the minor in Global Studies will ask students to take a combination of courses from two general themes:

1. *Global Systems (History, Politics, Gender, and Culture): Coursework focused on the historical, political, and cultural foundations of global trends and issues.

2. *Human Rights and Security: Coursework related to global human rights, gender and sexuality, violence against women, human trafficking, foreign policy, state- and non-state based conflict, and human security issues.

Minor with language option. The minor in Global Studies with language consists of 16 credits of required courses, one of which must be a foreign language course at the 200 level or above, taught in a language other than English.

General Considerations:

- The minor is open to undergraduate students in any major.
- The minor will require students to take two core courses (six credits), which will provide the political and cultural foundations of global issues and concerns. In addition, students are required to participate in the one-credit, pass/fail class ARSC300: Issues in Global Studies. (This is a new one-credit course which replaces the temporary ARSC367: Research in Area Studies).
- Students will take three courses from Track 1 or three courses from Track 2. Students pursuing the Global Studies minor with language must replace one of the courses with a foreign language course at the 200-level or above, taught in a language other than English.
- Students cannot count more than 6 credits from the home department of their major towards the minor.
- Students who participate in a Study Abroad program can offer one of the courses taken abroad towards the minor. In similar vein, students who participate in an internship program or undergraduate research program with a global content can offer up to three credits towards the minor. The combination of Study Abroad participation, internships and undergraduate research cannot exceed six credits towards the minor.
- Courses with variable topics are eligible to count towards the minor when they address global or international aspects (i.e., when taught in Study Abroad programs). Students need to seek approval from the academic advisor for the minor if they think their variable content course fulfills this requirement.

REQUIREMENTS

Minor in Global Studies: 16 credits in total

Minor in Global Studies with language: 16 credits in total, one of which must be a foreign language at the 200 level or above, taught in a language other than English.

CORE REQUIREMENTS (SEVEN CREDITS): All students must take the following courses:

- ARSC300: Issues in Global Studies (1 credit)
- ANTH101: Peoples of the World (3 credits)
- POSC270: Introduction to Comparative Politics (3 credits)

Students must take three courses from Track 1 or three courses from Track 2. Students pursuing the Global Studies minor with language must replace one the courses with a foreign language course at the 200-level or above, taught in a language other than English.

Dear Prof. Gelb,

Last year the Center for Global and Area Studies and the Institute for Global Studies submitted a proposal for a new undergraduate minor in Global Studies, open to students in any undergraduate major in all seven colleges. Based on the feedback provided by the Educational Affairs committee, we have a new proposal that offers a more focused minor. The new proposal is attached, and I write today to solicit your endorsement. I respectfully ask that you reply as soon as possible but no later than September 27, so I can include your support when I submit the proposal for review to the college and university faculty senates. An email endorsing the proposal would suffice.

Thanks for your consideration,

Julio

Re: Global Studies Minor

I am writing on behalf of the Department of Anthropology to express enthusiastic support for the new minor in Global Studies at the University of Delaware. We are pleased to see that the discipline of anthropology is central to your curriculum in that Anthropology 101 (Introduction to Social and Cultural Anthropology) is one of three required courses and that you have included so many of our other classes in your list of electives (and appropriately so!). We think this is a very timely offering to our students who are coming into the work force or on to graduate education today when issues of globalization are increasingly important to all fields of study. We are confident that we will be able to accommodate the students who need or desire to take our classes as part of this minor. We anticipate that the global studies minor will be of interest to a large number of Anthropology students and look forward to working with you (and them). Please let me know how we can help you to strengthen this program which has our strongest support.

Dear Prof. Awokuse,

Last year the Center for Global and Area Studies and the Institute for Global Studies submitted a proposal for a new undergraduate minor in Global Studies, open to students in any undergraduate major in all seven colleges. Based on the feedback provided by the Educational Affairs committee, we have a new proposal that offers a more focused minor. The new proposal is attached, and I write today to solicit your endorsement. I respectfully ask that you reply as soon as possible but no later than September 27, so I can include your support when I submit the proposal for review to the college and university faculty senates. An email endorsing the proposal would suffice.

Thanks for your consideration,

Julio

Dear Dr. Carrion,

On behalf of the Department of Behavioral Health and Nutrition I extend our support for your proposed minor in Global Studies with the condition that BHAN is working towards the creation of a minor in Global Health. We do not see the purpose and intent of the Global Studies minor conflicting with what we will propose, although some of the courses in the elective portion may overlap.

Given that your focus is on Global Systems and Human Rights and Security, and ours will focus more on global public health related issues we see these as distinct minors. Specifically, our minor will include the Introduction to Global Health course, whereas your minor does not. If you are in agreement with our conditional support, then consider this email as indication of our support for the minor and approval to include the two NTDT courses that you have listed in the proposal.

Greetings Julio,

My apologies for the delay in my reply. I have been on travel and just found this note.

We happily support this proposal.

My one suggestion is that you consider ENEP 410 for track 1 (in addition to track 2) -- it reviews the history of environmentalism and examines differing cultural perspectives on environmental conflicts.

In future, please copy our Academic Support Coordinator, Gwen Looby -- she can track me down!

Dear Professor Byrne,

Sorry to approach you again but I do need a response from your department regarding endorsement for the proposed minor in Global Studies. We are considering including the following courses in Track 2 of our minor:

ENEP 410	Political Economy of Environment
ENEP 424	Sustainable Energy Policies and Planning
ENEP 426	Climate Change

I'm attaching the minor's justification and description for your information. Time is the essence, so I'd like to request a speedy reply

MEMORANDUM

TO: Julio Carrión, Director, CGAS

FROM: John Ernest, Chair, Department of English

SUBJECT: Proposal for a Minor in Global Studies

I write to express my strong support for the proposed Minor in Global Studies. The rationale is clear and compelling, demonstrating the extent to which the proposed Minor would promote the university's stated goals for undergraduate education. Equally important, the proposed Minor offers an innovative model for interdisciplinary studies—enabling students to develop global knowledge and awareness in a broad range of practical, ethical, and political fields. The interdisciplinary dynamics of the minor as proposed will, in my view, be rich and productive, and should lead to valuable discussions on global citizenship at UD and beyond in the coming years. The English Department will benefit from this occasion for innovative teaching and research, and our students will surely benefit from this opportunity to develop new tools for addressing and assuming leadership in the global environment that will define their professional and personal lives after graduation.

In short, this is an impressive program, one in which the English Department is proud to participate, and one that will undoubtedly enhance the university's reputation.

Julio,

I would suggest ENWC 444 (Conservation of Tropical Biodiversity), ENWC 450 (Debates in Conservation Biology), ENWC 452 (Conservation of African Wildlife), and ENWC 453 (Community-Based Conservation). All these courses are taught regularly on our study abroad programs. I'm not sure that ENWC456 (Conservation Biology) really fits the intent of the minor since its focus is really not international. With the changes I outlined above, I would endorse this new minor.

Take care,
Jake

Dear Julio,

The Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures would have liked to see the study of a foreign language play a more integral role in the proposed global studies minor rather than an optional one. We understand, however, your objective of attracting students from across the whole university, not only from the College of Arts and Sciences, and that in those colleges without a language requirement, this would constitute a significant barrier. I therefore endorse the minor proposal in its present form.

Julio,

We are very supportive of our geography courses in the new Global Studies program. We feel that the geography courses are an integral part of this program with geography's spatial synthesis perspective. For your information, we have several retirements taking place in geography over the next few years and may suggest courses to remove and add from the program. A course to consider adding to the Global Security and Sustainability Track is Geog422 Resources, Development and the Environment which Yda Schreuder teaches and our new hire Afton Clarke-Sather plans to take over. Good luck initiating this new program. Tracy

As I noted, we are happy to support this initiative. In addition, please consider adding the following course, which will be offered regularly for the foreseeable future:

MUSC 223-070: Steel Band Traditions and Practice (3 credits)

This course requires no previous knowledge of music or any previous musical instrument study. You will be introduced to the steel drum, its history, performance practice, and its role in a steel drum ensemble. In addition, you will study and learn music theory, improvisation, chord reading, note reading, and ear training while learning to play the steel drum. You will also learn about the history and development of steel drums in Trinidad as not only a musical movement, but also as a political and socio-economic movement.

Julio--

I will be happy to endorse this. I will also offer a few more courses, as we now have an ongoing winter session course on steel drums that is taught in Trinidad. I will get the information so that you can add it to your proposal if you would like.

Dear Prof. Murray,

Last year the Center for Global and Area Studies and the Institute for Global Studies submitted a proposal for a new undergraduate minor in Global Studies, open to students in any undergraduate major in all seven colleges. Based on the feedback provided by the Educational Affairs committee, we have a new proposal that offers a more focused minor. The new proposal is attached, and I write today to solicit your endorsement. I respectfully ask that you reply as soon as possible but no later than October 4, so I can include your support when I submit the proposal for review to the college and university faculty senates. An email endorsing the proposal would suffice.

Thanks for your consideration,

Julio

Dear Julio,
My apologies - I had thought that I had responded. Yes, I fully endorse the proposal, as I think it would provide a useful minor that would also serve to introduce a broader set of students to at least one course that we offer - and perhaps more in the future.

Dear Julio, the Department of Political Science and International Relations is pleased to support the proposed minor in Global Studies. We are also pleased that one of our introductory classes, POSC 270, will be one of the required classes for the minor and that several of our POSC classes are among those from which students may choose as they seek to complete the minor. We are confident that many of our political science and international relations majors will want to add a Global Studies Minor. Kind regards, Gretchen Bauer

Thanks and sorry for insisting, but time is running out. I certainly understand that your faculty might not be in a position to answer in the time I have

Dear Monika,

I'm attaching the final version of the Global Studies Minor. I have added some references to gender and sexuality where I thought it was needed, and added "gender" as part of the description of Track 1. I also added the courses that were suggested. I have highlighted the additions in the attached document. I'd like to know if your department is now in a position to endorse the minor.

Thanks!

Dear Nancy and Julio,

We were delighted to see the proposal for the new Global Studies Minor and are excited about the many collaborations this minor could allow for. For quite some time now, WOMS has been actively engaged in global issues (both in its curriculum and in faculty research) and we would like to discuss how we could connect the proposed new minor specifically with our Concentration in Women in Global Perspective. More generally, we believe that a global studies minor speaks directly to the mission and course offerings of the Department of Women and Gender Studies since our field is founded on and embraces interdisciplinarity

We have listed a number of opportunities for collaboration. The first occasion is found in your discussion of the key components of the minor, particularly as it pertains to interdisciplinary work. As interdisciplinarity is a key feature of Women's Studies, our faculty and course offerings are well suited to provide your future students with mastery of this critical skill. We recommend including Women's Studies in your list of disciplines in this section.

Other suggestions for inclusion are as follows:

1) Track One: Global History, Politics and Culture:

- Gender included in list of coursework foci
- WOMS210 Women and Religion as a course offering

2) Track Two: Global Security and Sustainability

- Violence Against Women and Human Trafficking included in additional non-state security issues
- Women's Studies as a department heading
- WOMS240 Women and Violence as a course offering

We are attaching a description of our concentration in Women in Global Perspective for you to review. Also, we would very much enjoy meeting with you in order to discuss further ways our department can enhance your new minor.

Sincerely,

Studies
