Dear Delaware Parent:

Parents often ask, “How can I help my child prepare for college?” The University of Delaware has designed the UD Commitment to Delawareans to answer that question. It gives you a “road map” that shows the path your child should take in order to be prepared for college.

Taking rigorous academic courses and doing well in them are the most important ways to prepare for college. The UD Commitment to Delawareans is a balanced curriculum of 20 full-year academic courses in English, mathematics, laboratory science, foreign languages, history, and social studies. It shows the courses, the levels, and the grades necessary—both in the beginning and throughout high school—from the beginning of high school through graduation—so your child can be prepared for college.

National studies and our own research tell us that students who do well in these courses have the best chance of success in college. The UD Commitment to Delawareans is more rigorous than the University's current minimum requirements for admission. We are looking towards the future, and by the time a current middle schooler in Delaware enters the University, it is probable that the requirements for success will be even more demanding than they are today.

The UD Commitment to Delawareans is more rigorous than the University's current minimum requirements for admission. We are looking towards the future, and by the time a current middle schooler in Delaware enters the University, it is probable that the requirements for success will be even more demanding than they are today.

You will be pleased to know that in developing this “road map,” we worked closely with school districts and other education professionals throughout Delaware. Delawareans come first in UD admissions. If your child takes the classes we recommend and does well in them, then there will be numerous opportunities to attend college without difficulty.

I hope that the UD Commitment to Delawareans will help you advise your child on how to prepare for college. The UD Admissions staff is looking forward to answering your questions. You may reach them at 302-831-8125 or at admissions@udel.edu.

Sincerely,

Dan Rich
Provost

The University of Delaware is committed to ending racial disparity in all areas and does not discriminate on the basis of sex, color, religion, national origin, age, disability, veteran status, or sexual orientation. Goa at UD’s Diversity Office (302-831-2627) or the Office of the President (302-831-1800) for more information. UD’s mission is to provide an academic and educational environment in which every student, staff member, and faculty member can reach his or her full potential. If you believe you have been a victim of discrimination, please report it to the University’s Title IX Coordinator or the Office of Human Resources. UD is committed to providing equal opportunities for all students, staff, faculty, and visitors. UD is a public institution of higher education. UD is an affirmative action employer.
Dear Delaware Parent:

Parents often ask, “How can I help my child prepare for college?” The University of Delaware has designed the UD Commitment to Delawareans to answer that question. It gives you a “road map” that shows the path towards preparing middle schoolers to be ready for college.

Taking rigorous academic courses and doing well in them is the best preparation for college. The UD Commitment to Delawareans is a balanced curriculum of 20 full-year academic courses in English, mathematics, laboratory science, foreign languages, history, and social studies. It shows the courses, the levels, and the grades necessary for success through the course of high school. The UD Commitment is designed to help ensure that Delaware students are well prepared for college.

National studies and our own research tell us that students who do well in these courses have the best chance of succeeding in college. The UD Commitment to Delawareans shows students how to prepare for college and gives you a “road map” that shows the path towards preparing middle schoolers to be ready for college.

The UD Commitment to Delawareans is more rigorous than the University’s current minimum requirements for admission. There is a reason for this. We are looking towards the future, and by the time a current middle schooler in Delaware enters the University, it is probable that the requirements for success will be even more demanding than they are today. You will be pleased to know that in developing this “road map,” the University has worked closely with school districts and other education professionals throughout the state.

Delawareans come first in UD admissions. If your child takes the classes recommended and does well in them, then he or she will be well prepared for college. What’s more, some, or all, of these structured academic courses may also fulfill the requirements for graduation.

I hope that the UD Commitment to Delawareans will help you advise your child on how to prepare for college. The UD Admissions Office is always happy to answer your questions. You may reach them at 302-831-8125 or at admissions@udel.edu.

Sincerely,

Dan Rich
Provost
Think of the Commitment to Delawareans as an academic roadmap. Its goal is to show you the courses you must complete and the level of performance you must achieve in them if you want to be confident of gaining admission onto the Newark campus of the University of Delaware. If you follow what we have outlined, you can also be confident that we will meet your demonstrated financial need up to full, in-state tuition with a combination of grants, loans, and/or college work-study.

Is this a guarantee of admission?
It is as close to a “guarantee” as we can make it. While no university can guarantee admission until a student has submitted a complete application, we can lay out what you need to do in grades 9 through 12 if you want to give yourself the best chance of being admitted. Our intention is to help students, parents, teachers, and guidance counselors answer the question, “How can students best prepare themselves for admission into the University of Delaware?”

How does the Commitment to Delawareans differ from the University’s published requirements for admission?
Our published requirements spell out only the minimum number of college preparatory courses students must complete to be considered for admission. For some students, meeting only these minimum requirements will not be enough to assure them of admission. Whether they actually get admitted to UD – and whether that admission is into a four-year degree program or to a two-year, Associate in Arts program – will still depend on such factors as their grades, their test scores, and the rigor of the courses they have selected. In addition to high school performance, the Admissions Committee takes many factors into consideration when evaluating an applicant, including but not limited to letters of recommendation, a portfolio, essay, and extracurricular and community involvement.

Following the guidelines presented in the Commitment to Delawareans, however, puts you on track for admission to the Newark campus into a four-year degree program. It also ensures that, once you do enroll, you will be among our best prepared students.

In short, the Commitment to Delawareans lays out a balanced curriculum of breadth and challenge in English, mathematics, laboratory science, foreign languages, and history and social studies. It is not only a roadmap for admission into an affordable education at the University of Delaware; it is also a curriculum to set you on the path to excellence as a University of Delaware student.

The most important predictor of academic success is the rigor of your course selection in high school. Next are the grades that you earn in rigorous, academic classes. Knowing that, we have developed a path that will show Delaware residents how they can best prepare themselves for admission into the University of Delaware.

The requirements that follow are not our minimum requirements for admission. Rather, they are more stringent than the ones we set forth in our admissions publications. Rest assured, however, that your classes will be counted in the University of Delaware. However, if you want to be confident of being admitted, here is a year-by-year plan that will lead you to a place in our freshman class.

specifically, we make this commitment:
• If you meet all of the requirements specified in the chart to the right, you can be confident of being admitted into the修补broken of the University of Delaware.
• Further, if you file the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), the University will meet your full, demonstrated financial need up to full, in-state tuition with a combination of grants, loans, and/or college work-study. The University will also attempt to meet your room and board costs as financial aid resources permit.

The University of Delaware Admissions Office will be working with each high school in our state to identify which of their courses we will count as college preparatory or higher.
Think of the Commitment to Delawareans as an academic roadmap. Its goal is to show you the courses you must complete and the level of performance you must achieve in them if you want to be confident of gaining admission onto the Newark campus of the University of Delaware. If you follow what we have outlined, you can also be confident that we will meet your demonstrated financial need up to full, in-state tuition with a combination of grants, loans, and/or college work-study.

Is this a guarantee of admission?

It is as close to a “guarantee” as we can make it. While no university can guarantee admission until a student has submitted a complete application, we can lay out what you need to do in grades 9 through 12 if you want to give yourself the best chance of being admitted. Our intention is to help students, parents, teachers, and guidance counselors answer the question, “How can students best prepare themselves for admission into the University of Delaware?”

How does the Commitment to Delawareans differ from the University’s published requirements for admission?

Our published requirements spell out only the minimum number of college preparatory courses students must complete to be considered for admission. For some students, meeting only these minimum requirements will not be enough to assure them of admission. Whether they actually get admitted to UD — and whether that admission is into a four-year degree program or to a two-year, Associate in Arts program — will still depend on such factors as their grades, their test scores, and the rigor of the courses they have selected. In addition to high school performance, the Admissions Committee takes many factors into consideration when evaluating an applicant, including but not limited to religious affiliation, extra-curricular and extracurricular community involvement.

Following the guidelines set forth in the Commitment to Delawareans, however, puts you on track for admission to the Newark campus into a four-year degree program. It also ensures that, once you do enroll, you will be among our best prepared students.

In short, the Commitment to Delawareans lays out a balanced curriculum of breadth and challenge in English, mathematics, laboratory science, foreign languages, and history and social studies. It is not only a roadmap for admission into an affordability education at the University of Delaware; it is also a curriculum to set you on the path to excellence as a University of Delaware student.

The residents of our home state have always enjoyed a special relationship with the University of Delaware. That is why we offer admission to every Delawarean applicant who demonstrates the ability to succeed at the University.

The most important predictor of academic success is the rigor of your course selection in high school. Next are the grades that you earn in rigorous, academic classes. Knowing that, we have developed a path that will show Delaware students how they can best prepare themselves for admission to the University of Delaware.

The requirements that follow are not our minimum requirements for admission. Rather, they are more stringent than the ones we set forth in our admissions publications. Rest assured, however, you can still be considered for admission to the University of Delaware. However, if you want to be confident of being admitted, here is a plan you can follow that will lead to a place in our freshman class.

Specifically, we make this commitment:

• If you meet all of the requirements specified in the chart to the right, then you can be confident of being admitted into the freshman class of the University of Delaware.

• Further, if you file the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), the University will meet your full, demonstrated financial need up to full, in-state tuition with a combination of grants, loans, and/or college work-study. The University will also attempt to meet your room and board costs as financial aid resources permit.

The University of Delaware Admissions Office will be working with each high school in our state to identify which of their courses we will count as college preparatory or higher.

What is the Commitment to Delawareans?
Think of the Commitment to Delawareans as an academic roadmap. It is designed to show you the courses you must complete and the level of performance you must achieve in them if you wish to be confident of gaining admission onto the Newark campus of the University of Delaware. If you follow what we have outlined, you can also be confident that we will meet your demonstrated financial need up to full, in-state tuition with a combination of grants, loans, and/or college work-study.

Is this a guarantee of admission?

It is as close to a “guarantee” as we can make it. While no university can guarantee admission until a student has submitted a complete application, we can lay out what you need to do in grades 9 through 12 if you want to give yourself the best chance of being admitted. Our intention is to help students, parents, teachers, and guidance counselors answer the question, “How can students best prepare themselves for admission into the University of Delaware?”

How does the Commitment to Delawareans differ from the University’s published requirements for admission?

Our published requirements spell out only the minimum number of college preparatory courses students must complete to be considered for admission. For some students, meeting only these minimum requirements will not be enough to assure them of admission. Whether they actually get admitted to UD – and whether that admission is into a four-year degree program or to a two-year, Associate in Arts program – will still depend on such factors as their grades, their test scores, and the rigor of the courses they have selected. In addition to high school performance, the Admissions Committee takes many factors into consideration when evaluating an applicant, including but not limited to letters of recommendation, extracurricular activities, and other personal and community involvement.

Following the guidelines set forth in the Commitment to Delawareans, however, you can be confident that you will meet the University’s admission criteria to the extent they are spelled out in this document. It is not only a roadmap for admission entered through academic education at the University of Delaware. It is a roadmap for preparing a year to year until the commitment for Delaware students.

The Commitment to Delawareans

The residents of our home state have always enjoyed a special relationship with the University of Delaware. That is why we offer admission to every Delawarean applicant who demonstrates the ability to succeed at the University.

The most important predictor of academic success is the rigor of your course selection in high school. Next comes the grade that you earn in rigorous, academic classes. Knowing this, we have developed a path that will allow Delaware residents how they best prepare themselves for admission into the University of Delaware.

The requirements that follow are not our minimum requirements for admission. Rather, they are more stringent than the ones we set forth in our admissions publications. Rest assured, however, you will be considered for admission to the University of Delaware. However, if you want to be confident of being admitted, here is a plan you can follow that will lead to a place in our freshman class.

Specifically, we make this commitment:

• If you meet all of the requirements specified in the chart to the right, then you can be confident of being admitted to the Newark campus of the University of Delaware.

• Further, if you file the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), the University will meet your full, demonstrated financial need up to full, in-state tuition with a combination of grants, loans, and/or college work-study. The University will also attempt to meet your room and board costs as financial aid resources permit.

The course requirements are designed to provide a balanced curriculum of breadth and challenge in English, mathematics, laboratory science, foreign languages, and history and social studies. It is not only a roadmap for admission to the University of Delaware; it is also a curriculum to set you on the path to excellence as a University of Delaware student.

The residents of our home state have always enjoyed a special relationship with the University of Delaware. That is why we offer admission to every Delawarean applicant who demonstrates the ability to succeed at the University.

The most important predictor of academic success is the rigor of your course selection in high school. Next is the grade that you earn in rigorous, academic classes. Knowing this, we have developed a path that will help Delaware residents how they best prepare themselves for admission into the University of Delaware.

The requirements that follow are not our minimum requirements for admission. Rather, they are more stringent than the ones we set forth in our admissions publications. Rest assured, however, you will be considered for admission to the University of Delaware. However, if you want to be confident of being admitted, here is a plan you can follow that will lead to a place in our freshman class.

Specifically, we make this commitment:

• If you meet all of the requirements specified in the chart to the right, then you can be confident of being admitted into the Newark campus of the University of Delaware.

• Further, if you file the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), the University will meet your full, demonstrated financial need up to full, in-state tuition with a combination of grants, loans, and/or college work-study. The University will also attempt to meet your room and board costs as financial aid resources permit.

The course requirements are designed to provide a balanced curriculum of breadth and challenge in English, mathematics, laboratory science, foreign languages, and history and social studies. It is not only a roadmap for admission to the University of Delaware; it is also a curriculum to set you on the path to excellence as a University of Delaware student.

The residents of our home state have always enjoyed a special relationship with the University of Delaware. That is why we offer admission to every Delawarean applicant who demonstrates the ability to succeed at the University.

The most important predictor of academic success is the rigor of your course selection in high school. Next comes the grade that you earn in rigorous, academic classes. Knowing this, we have developed a path that will help Delaware residents how they best prepare themselves for admission into the University of Delaware.

The requirements that follow are not our minimum requirements for admission. Rather, they are more stringent than the ones we set forth in our admissions publications. Rest assured, however, you will be considered for admission to the University of Delaware. However, if you want to be confident of being admitted, here is a plan you can follow that will lead to a place in our freshman class.

Specifically, we make this commitment:

• If you meet all of the requirements specified in the chart to the right, then you can be confident of being admitted into the Newark campus of the University of Delaware.

• Further, if you file the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), the University will meet your full, demonstrated financial need up to full, in-state tuition with a combination of grants, loans, and/or college work-study. The University will also attempt to meet your room and board costs as financial aid resources permit.

The course requirements are designed to provide a balanced curriculum of breadth and challenge in English, mathematics, laboratory science, foreign languages, and history and social studies. It is not only a roadmap for admission to the University of Delaware; it is also a curriculum to set you on the path to excellence as a University of Delaware student.

The residents of our home state have always enjoyed a special relationship with the University of Delaware. That is why we offer admission to every Delawarean applicant who demonstrates the ability to succeed at the University.

The most important predictor of academic success is the rigor of your course selection in high school. Next comes the grade that you earn in rigorous, academic classes. Knowing this, we have developed a path that will help Delaware residents how they best prepare themselves for admission into the University of Delaware.

The requirements that follow are not our minimum requirements for admission. Rather, they are more stringent than the ones we set forth in our admissions publications. Rest assured, however, you will be considered for admission to the University of Delaware. However, if you want to be confident of being admitted, here is a plan you can follow that will lead to a place in our freshman class.

Specifically, we make this commitment:

• If you meet all of the requirements specified in the chart to the right, then you can be confident of being admitted into the Newark campus of the University of Delaware.

• Further, if you file the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), the University will meet your full, demonstrated financial need up to full, in-state tuition with a combination of grants, loans, and/or college work-study. The University will also attempt to meet your room and board costs as financial aid resources permit.

The course requirements are designed to provide a balanced curriculum of breadth and challenge in English, mathematics, laboratory science, foreign languages, and history and social studies. It is not only a roadmap for admission to the University of Delaware; it is also a curriculum to set you on the path to excellence as a University of Delaware student.

The residents of our home state have always enjoyed a special relationship with the University of Delaware. That is why we offer admission to every Delawarean applicant who demonstrates the ability to succeed at the University.

The most important predictor of academic success is the rigor of your course selection in high school. Next comes the grade that you earn in rigorous, academic classes. Knowing this, we have developed a path that will help Delaware residents how they best prepare themselves for admission into the University of Delaware.

The requirements that follow are not our minimum requirements for admission. Rather, they are more stringent than the ones we set forth in our admissions publications. Rest assured, however, you will be considered for admission to the University of Delaware. However, if you want to be confident of being admitted, here is a plan you can follow that will lead to a place in our freshman class.

Specifically, we make this commitment:

• If you meet all of the requirements specified in the chart to the right, then you can be confident of being admitted into the Newark campus of the University of Delaware.

• Further, if you file the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), the University will meet your full, demonstrated financial need up to full, in-state tuition with a combination of grants, loans, and/or college work-study. The University will also attempt to meet your room and board costs as financial aid resources permit.

The course requirements are designed to provide a balanced curriculum of breadth and challenge in English, mathematics, laboratory science, foreign languages, and history and social studies. It is not only a roadmap for admission to the University of Delaware; it is also a curriculum to set you on the path to excellence as a University of Delaware student.

The residents of our home state have always enjoyed a special relationship with the University of Delaware. That is why we offer admission to every Delawarean applicant who demonstrates the ability to succeed at the University.

The most important predictor of academic success is the rigor of your course selection in high school. Next comes the grade that you earn in rigorous, academic classes. Knowing this, we have developed a path that will help Delaware residents how they best prepare themselves for admission into the University of Delaware.

The requirements that follow are not our minimum requirements for admission. Rather, they are more stringent than the ones we set forth in our admissions publications. Rest assured, however, you will be considered for admission to the University of Delaware. However, if you want to be confident of being admitted, here is a plan you can follow that will lead to a place in our freshman class.

Specifically, we make this commitment:

• If you meet all of the requirements specified in the chart to the right, then you can be confident of being admitted into the Newark campus of the University of Delaware.

• Further, if you file the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), the University will meet your full, demonstrated financial need up to full, in-state tuition with a combination of grants, loans, and/or college work-study. The University will also attempt to meet your room and board costs as financial aid resources permit.

The course requirements are designed to provide a balanced curriculum of breadth and challenge in English, mathematics, laboratory science, foreign languages, and history and social studies. It is not only a roadmap for admission to the University of Delaware; it is also a curriculum to set you on the path to excellence as a University of Delaware student.

The residents of our home state have always enjoyed a special relationship with the University of Delaware. That is why we offer admission to every Delawarean applicant who demonstrates the ability to succeed at the University.

The most important predictor of academic success is the rigor of your course selection in high school. Next comes the grade that you earn in rigorous, academic classes. Knowing this, we have developed a path that will help Delaware residents how they best prepare themselves for admission into the University of Delaware.

The requirements that follow are not our minimum requirements for admission. Rather, they are more stringent than the ones we set forth in our admissions publications. Rest assured, however, you will be considered for admission to the University of Delaware. However, if you want to be confident of being admitted, here is a plan you can follow that will lead to a place in our freshman class.

Specifically, we make this commitment:

• If you meet all of the requirements specified in the chart to the right, then you can be confident of being admitted into the Newark campus of the University of Delaware.

• Further, if you file the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), the University will meet your full, demonstrated financial need up to full, in-state tuition with a combination of grants, loans, and/or college work-study. The University will also attempt to meet your room and board costs as financial aid resources permit.
Dear Delaware Parent:

Parents often ask, “How can I help my child prepare for college?” The University of Delaware has designed the UD Commitment to Delawareans to answer that question. It gives you a “road map” that shows the high school courses your child should take if they want to be prepared for college.

Taking rigorous academic courses and doing well is the best way to prepare for college. The UD Commitment to Delawareans is a balanced curriculum of 20 full-year academic courses in English, mathematics, laboratory science, foreign languages, history, and social studies. It shows the courses, the levels, and the grades necessary – from the beginning of high school through graduation – that will get your child the best chance at being admitted to the University of Delaware (and to most other colleges and universities).

National studies and our own research tell us that students who do well in these courses in high school have a better chance of succeeding in college. The UD Commitment to Delawareans is more rigorous than the University’s current minimum requirements for admission. We are looking towards the future, and by the time a current middle schooler in Delaware enters the University, it is probable that the requirements for success will be even more demanding than they are today. You will be pleased to know that in developing this “road map,” the University has worked closely with school districts and other education professionals throughout the state.

Delawareans come first in UD admissions. If your child takes the classes we recommend and does well in them, then your child will have an excellent chance of being admitted to the University. What’s more, you can be assured that a UD education is affordable. The University will also do all that it can to meet demonstrated financial need so that a University of Delaware education is affordable.

I hope that the UD Commitment to Delawareans will help you advise your child on how to prepare for college. The UD Admissions office is looking forward to answering your questions. You may reach them at 302-831-8125 or at admissions@udel.edu.

Sincerely,

Dan Rich
Provost

Check us out at www.udel.edu/commitment

For a Spanish version of this brochure, please go to www.udel.edu/compromiso

For a Spanish version of this brochure, please go to www.udel.edu/compromiso

Commitment to Delawareans

The University of Delaware is committed to meeting equal opportunity in all matters and does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, gender, religion, ancestry, national origin, sexual orientation, veteran status, age or disability in its educational programs, activities, admissions or employment practices as required by Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, the Americans with Disabilities Act, other applicable statutes and University policy. Inquiries concerning these statutes and information regarding campus accessibility should be referred to the Affirmative Action officer, 305 Hullihen Hall, (302) 831-2835 (voice), (302) 831-4563 (TDD).